

THE NEW PLAYS

"Just Outside the Door"
Has One Human Situation.

BY CHARLES DARTON.

WHEN a girl who is true-blue stands up for a little brother with a yellow streak running all through him, it is only human to feel there is more good left in the world. This impression, at least, is made at the Gaiety Theatre by Joyce Kilmer Goodman's latest play, "Just Outside the Door."

But the author should have put more heart and less theory into his play. People do not go to the theatre to be told about "stature" influences. Even the characters in the play confess they don't know what they're talking about. It really seems nothing more than a desperate attempt on the part of the author to defend himself against the use of the long arm of conscience.

To this and a great deal of talk is wasted by a bishop and a doctor. They are in a library—and a library sometimes has a strange influence upon the mind. It is not until an untalented girl makes her way into the place through a window that the play gains any dramatic action. Her coming happens to be a "coincidence," for the son of the house, a socialist who has learned to love her in his sentiment work, is waiting for her to respond to his earlier telephone call and meet his eminently desirable family.

It doesn't matter that romance which is supposed to be just outside the door is brought in by way of the window. In fact, the sentimental bishop's ideas of romance as opposed to those of the lawyer are quite forgotten by this time. The play is suddenly brought to life by melodramatic forces. A hunted girl is on the carpet.

Painful as the moment may seem, it is a relief to find that the author has at last realized the error of his drastic ways. It appears that the girl who pops into the home of the socialist has just had a bad quarter of an hour with a banker from whom her young brother has stolen money. It also appears she has stabbed the banker with a paper-knife because of his unimpeachable attitude toward her when she appealed to him on behalf of her brother. The fact that the young woman who hides Madge Davis from a detective has promised to marry the injured financier is only another coincidence.

The play offers one essentially human situation when the boy follows his sister into the house and then steals jewels and money for the purpose of getting out of town. She makes him give up his loot. He threatens to strike her only to fall sobbing at her knees. Later he redeems himself in a sense by stepping into the room with a pistol in his pocket and compelling the banker to tell the truth about Madge. Then the banker calls off the detective and all ends happily.

This isn't so exciting as it may sound, though the scenes between sister and brother are affecting. Kathlene MacDonell plays Madge feelingly without once giving way to tears, and this is unusual in a young actress. She is desperately human. Ernest Pruex is equally true to type as the boy who goes wrong. Elliott Dexter is rather self-conscious and rhetorical as the socialist, and Stella Kromb, in the role of his sister, should cultivate a more simple manner. David Glasford, as the doctor, and Frank Loewe, as the bishop, are burdened with the author's views of life, so only heaven can reward them for their earnest efforts. But Lizzie Hudson Collier is so charming as a gentlewoman of the old school that her worth as an actress means a great deal to the play. For her sake, if not for the bishop's, the author should have made love's old dream a realization. For better distinction is given the acting by Frank Kemble Cooper as the injured, though not ruined, banker.

In spite of the good acting, however, the play is never brought close to the audience. It remains "Just Outside the Door."

SLAYER'S CHILDREN

ARE FACING LIFE

AS PUBLIC CHARGES

Brooklyn Society Takes Over

Four Little Ones of Detective Who Killed Wife.

The Brooklyn Children's Society took charge this afternoon of four of the five children of Samuel Leitner, the private detective who confessed in Coroner Feinberg's court yesterday that he shot and killed his wife Monday evening in his office, at No. 62 East 43rd Street. The oldest child, Basil, aged nine, is being cared for by an aunt in Manhattan.

It is quite likely that the four younger children, Dora, aged eight; Jonas, five; William, three, and Harold, nine months old, will be sent to an institution. Mrs. Leitner's relatives are poor, and with a long term in prison, the best the future holds for the father, the children appear to be doomed to the life of public charges.

Neighbors have been caring for the children since Monday night. A little girl named Marion Sweet, employed by the Leitners as a maid, closed up the desolated home at No. 1815 Forty-first Street, Borough Park, this afternoon and went to her own home. Although she had been with the troubled family only a month she was deeply attached to the little children, and her parting from the baby distressed even the agents of the Children's Society.

Leitner's attack on his wife's character, which he admitted to explain the murder, is hotly resented by the woman's relatives. They declare that she was a good wife and was unjustly subjected for years to unfounded accusations by her husband.

AUSTRIA SHY ON FOOD, PRICES ARE DOUBLED, SAYS U. S. PHYSICIAN

Dr. Frank C. Davis, Back From Vienna, Adds Military Limit Is Almost Reached.

Foodstuffs are becoming scarce in Austria-Hungary and the dual monarchy has almost reached the limit of its military strength, according to Dr. Frank C. Davis, an American, who reached New York today on the steamship Nordland.

Dr. Davis is President of the American Medical Association of Vienna and has lived in the Austrian capital for three years.

"The spirit of the people in Austria is splendid," he said. "They are determined to win at all costs. But foodstuffs are getting scarce and prices have been doubled. Germany has given military assistance to Austria, but has not helped out with food."

"Above all things the Austrians are determined to crush Italy, whose entry into the war is resented as being without provocation. Dr. Kilbourne, an associate of mine who is in the Austrian army, told me the Austrians are so strongly entrenched along the Italian frontier that it will be impossible for the Italians to move them. He also told me that for every Austrian killed four Italians lost their lives."

William V. Hirsch of New York, who sailed on the last eastward voyage of the Nordland, told a story hitherto unrelated in this country, of how British officers halted the liner off the Downs and seized an American named Malloy, who was on board with his wife and secretary. Vice Consul Townsend of Carlsbad, who also was a passenger, protested, but the British officers told him to "write to the proper authorities." Malloy was suspected of being a German spy.

The Nordland carried thirty-nine first cabin, 197 second cabin and 160 third class passengers on her voyage which ended today. She sailed from Rotterdam Aug. 21.

IS YOUR BLOOD GOOD OR BAD?
Lancaster, N. Y.—"I was very badly run down and could not do my regular work easily. I needed building up—was in a bad state. I suppose it was general debility. I tried different remedies but they did little good. Finally, I procured Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and began taking it. I got better at once. Kept on until I had taken six bottles. I was then as well and strong as ever. I give great credit to this valuable remedy for it did me so much good."—MR. THOMAS ROBINSON, 31 Church Street, Lancaster, N. Y.—Advt.

RIVER DEAD IDENTIFIED.

One That of Robert E. Gordon, the Other of Lewis Robinson.

The bodies found in the water about the city were identified today. One was that of Robert E. Gordon, a 38-year-old, married man, who left the city home on his way to work. The other was that of Lewis Robinson, a 40-year-old, married man, who was found at the foot of Jefferson Street. The other was that of Lewis Robinson, a 40-year-old, married man, who was found at the foot of Jefferson Street.

HERE YOU HAVE A CHOICE OF 4 SMART NEW STYLES IN 3/4 AND 7/8 LENGTHS.

These coats have the new shaped collars, some intaid with velvet, cuffs to correspond; wide belts—full ripple effect flaring gracefully from the waist line; fancy patch or slashed pockets. One particularly effective model is edged with silk braid. THE MATERIALS ARE SERVICEABLE FRENCH, STORM AND WIDE WALE SERGE IN NAVY BLUE AND BLACK. Not only are these coats smart to a high degree, but they are faultlessly tailored in every detail. Some are lined to the hips; others are full lined with guaranteed satin.

Very Pretty New Fall Tub Dresses for Girls $1

(Sizes 6 to 14 Years)

A hundred cents never bought such value, here or elsewhere.

Unusually handsome styles, which will show you the fallacy of sitting over a sewing machine and using time and labor to no effect—or at least to no such effect as is here in evidence.

Every one of these dresses is effectively trimmed. Some have collar and vestee of white pique, others have collar intaid with striped material, and belt and fold on skirt to match; still others are trimmed with pipings, buttons, tabs, fancy pockets, silk or cord ties, etc. All have full-plaited skirts.

An unusually attractive array of materials—all serviceable—including PERCALE, GINGHAM AND CHAMBRAY in pretty colors, ROMAN AND NOVELTY STRIPES, DASHING PLAIDS, etc.

We repeat—NEVER SUCH EXCELLENT DRESSES AS THESE $1 FOR SO LOW A PRICE.

Sale of White Blouses

For Women and Misses, 49c

Tomorrow, at . . . . .

You will see at a glance when you view them tomorrow that these blouses were never intended to be sold for so low a figure. We purchased them underprice and sell them in precisely similar manner. Four handsome styles from which to make selection, and all sizes from 34 to 44 inch bust.

These blouses are well made of WHITE VOILE, have deep hem-stitched collars, insertions of lace, full length sleeves with cuffs. Some are handsomely embroidered.

One dainty model is made of RICE CLOTH and has white corded collar, vestee and cuffs, and is hemstitched.

It wouldn't be a bad idea for you to buy one of each style, because it is a positive fact that you can't buy blouses similar in character or style elsewhere at the price named.
